

Fabien Dombard

Co-founder and CEO

As co-founder and CEO of QuoScient, it is Fabien's commitment is to reconcile human creativity and intuition with the complexity of information technology in the context of security operations. It was precisely this passion that led him to develop QuoScient's core product QuoLab.

Fabien started his work in the field of cyber security more than a decade ago. During his career, he gathered a lot of expertise in various sectors as well as while working for different clients ranging from private companies to public institutions. Prior to founding QuoScient, he was a global head of Malware Response at one of the world's largest financial institutions.

Those who know him well define him as consistently curious with an insatiable appetite to learn and improve the world around him. From developing a new product to learning a new skill to working with his team, Fabien is driven by Nelson Mandela's words: "I never lose. Either I win, or I learn."

His mission is to combine the strengths of humans and machines to create the best possible defense against cyberattacks.
